

USE CASE

Hospital Clearance Program

Streamline Hospital Clearance with Acuity's Comprehensive Employment Screening Services

Background

Hospital clearance, also known as hospital credentialing, is the process by which a hospital or medical facility verifies that anyone entering a hospital or healthcare setting, including healthcare providers and vendor personnel, has the appropriate medical and professional screening.

Screening involves assessing medical history and immunization status in accordance with hospital safety requirements and standards. These checks prevent unnecessary exposure to the vulnerable patient population within a facility.

Challenges

Many hospitals employ credentialing specialists to verify the medical status and professional qualifications of healthcare providers and vendor personnel – a costly, time-consuming, error-prone, and unscalable process.

Challenges include:

- Confirming credentials with medical schools, residency programs, licensing boards, hospital privileging, past employers, and government exclusions takes time and effort.
- Background checks are manual and complex, involving multiple databases.
- Medical and immunization record reviews, as well as administering vaccine updates, can delay onboarding.
- Executive committee review, interviews, and approvals often cause bottlenecks.
- Aligning credentialing with hospital systems and issuing required access cards adds extra steps.
- Ongoing tracking is required to keep credentials up to date.
- Adherence to regulatory and data protection standards requires constant vigilance.

Summary

Acuity International's employment screening services streamline hospital and medical facility clearance programs and ensure a safe and compliant workforce.
